

Global solutions, exceptional results.

Cobra was created by lawyers to help make the practice of law more efficient and affordable. We work with your firm to provide the highest quality and most cost effective review service, whether for you or your client. Understanding when to use the services of a Legal Process Outsourcing Company (LPO) can help retain clients AND land new accounts. In addition to helping you identify these instances, we can also help you improve your bottom line on fixed fee, contingency and success fee matters.

When should you consider using the services of an LPO?

When the scope of discovery is large

Cobra's full time attorney team can help you meet court ordered deadlines in a timely manner. We can provide the resources you need to facilitate document review, the scope of which is larger than what your office might normally handle. Scaling up and adding resources without hiring new employees is a tangible benefit to using an LPO for this fluctuating phase of litigation.

When you want the most reliable review process in any area of your practice

Often overlooked is the added benefit of having multiple layers of review for documents or contracts. By providing affordable, high quality Document Review Services and/or M&A Due Diligence services, Cobra can significantly reduce costs for clients and law firms, realigning valuable in-house or law firm resources without sacrificing the excellence, accuracy, and efficiency that international corporations and innovative law firms demand. We have an experienced first level review team, a separate quality control team and a US Attorney team that will review documents pursuant to your instructions and identify those documents with specific questions to your attorneys. This allows your attorney team to stay engaged, focusing only on the most important documents. Your time is freed up to address more high-level issues, and your client saves money in the process. All of this occurs while the US team is sleeping, ensuring that valuable time is never wasted. Such efficiency allows multiple levels of review for each document while keeping costs to a minimum. With each human review, different questions can be raised to allow for more conscientious decisions on the most important documents. In return, your clients receive the most reliable and defensible product.

When you aren't an "expert" in managing technology vendors

Today it's not uncommon to hire specialized vendors and non-attorney consultants to assist the parties and the courts in providing technical expertise with the collection, review and production of Electronically Stored Information (ESI). Capable of managing all vendors across the eDiscovery process, Cobra is your go-to team, assisting you from start to finish – from the initial intake of ESI with your client all the way to the production phase, and all points in between. Our exhaustive methodologies, mapped out at the onset of each new project, account for staffing, deliverables, hosting, processing, production, protocol and communication plans. Our due-diligence makes the entire process easier and more efficient. With your law firm's needs in mind, (not to mention your client's expectations), we will help craft the best and most defensible process for your case.
